By Pat Peebles

The Thanksgiving Dinner at the Lodge was shared by 25 people besides an excellent dinner the comradery was great!! My special thanks to Barbara Richards for coordinating the meal.

RE: SKI SOCIALS. You get good food and drink at a very nominal price thanks to the hours of work in the kitchen and the hospitality of your host(ess). Sometimes guests forget to PAY for their dinner and/or drinks. This is your hosts loss not the WMC loss. They cover all expenses out of their pockets and charge us just to get their expenses back. There will be two socials each month during January, February, and March. Please check the Rambler for starting times as they vary for each social and please remember this is a Sunday evening and most people have Monday morning commitments!

CONSERVATION NOTES

By Peter Hovingh

There are many conservation and environmental issues and, about as many organizations involved with these issues. In the frontiers of the West the issues are often different than in the long-settled East. Likewise, the knowledge of the natural systems is less known in the West than in the East.

Many of the issues involve land and land management. Arid lands cannot be treated the same way as rain-forest lands. One of the best means to protect lands is the Wilderness Classification. To help achieve more lands into the National Wilderness Preservation Areas, the Wasatch Mountain Club has contributed to Utah Wilderness Association.

In the arid west water issues are the basis of many political actions. We have passed the era of large dam constructions on major streams. We have now entered into the era where water is gradually pumped from the stream - leaving the potential of not having any stream left. Likewise, with peaking power being increased at the large dams, the stream bed may oscillate between a dry bed and a flooded bed. To assist in the preservation of streams, the Wasatch Mountain Club contributes to the Intermountain Water Alliance.

Often events can occur and there is no understanding as to a cause. A certain species of bird can decline greatly in numbers. Yet its habitat and food supply seems assured. Only recently has the realization been made that many migratory birds spend most of their time (8 months out of the year) in the tropics. The destruction of the tropics can lead to greatly reduced numbers of species in the North. Nature Conservancy is greatly interested in examining the habitat requirements of tropical ecosystems and in preserving these ecosystems. The Wasatch Mountain Club contributes to this organization.

This coming winter a lecture series on the Great Basin will occur in the Chemistry Building at the University of Utah campus. The series is sponsored in part by the Wasatch Mountain Club and organized by the Utah Museum of Natural History. The lecture series should be of interest to all members of the Wasatch Mountain Club who enjoy the Great Basin. It might change the course of a hike from an overlook in which a vista of 100 miles can be seen to an underlook of a lizard or a blooming sagebrush. The more we understand our environment, the more enjoyable the environment becomes, but --- the less tolerable one becomes of the gigantic (or even little) impacts!

FEDERATION OF WESTERN OUTDOOR CLUBS ANNUAL MEETING

By Barbara Richards, Delegate

The annual FWOC meeting was held at Evergreen State College, Olympia, Washington from August 27th to August 29th, 1982. The 22 delegates in attendance represented forty-two outdoor clubs and a total membership of 400,000 persons.

The FWOC is a conservation-oriented coalition of outdoor clubs whose purpose is to retain, expand and protect wilderness, the environment, and plant and animal life therein. The Wasatch Mt. Club was a charter member when the Federation was established in 1932 and is rejoining the FWOC after several years of non-membership.

During the meetings we heard speakers from the eight western states represented in FWOC. The presentations were geared to conservation issues of concern in these states.

My most compelling observation was that the majority of conservation workers at this meeting were senior club members. I found them intelligent, articulate, and concerned. My recommendations are that the WMC, 1) offer some activities geared to our older club members' interests and abilities, and 2) that we make use of these people who because of their mature realization of the benefits of conservation are willing to devote some of their time to the type of concerns which will benefit future generations.

GREAT BASIN LECTURE SERIES

The Utah Museum of Natural History is pleased to sponsor a series of lectures focusing on the Great Basin. This area in which we live is one of the most unique environments in the world. Very few individuals recognize or understand the complexities of this landscape. With increasing social, economic and political pressures being placed on the Great Basin Region, we believe it is critical that the public have every opportunity to become informed. If we are to develop a sense of place, we must begin at home - in the Great Basin.

TIME: Monday Evenings, 7:30 PM

PLACE: 103 Henry Eyring Building (Chemistry)

COST: $1.00 per lecture (13) or $10.00 for Series (UMNH Members - Series Price $8.00)

Gourmet Snow Shoe Tour to Lake Mary - "Can You Stomach This?"

by Neil Hinckley

Delicious, sumptuous, haute cuisine are insufficient superlatives to describe the partable, delectable, eatables shared by the "hungry twenty-one" who participated in the Gourmet Snow Shoe Tour to Lake Mary on November 21st. What better motivation do you need to strap on snow shoes at the Brighton parking lot and go on the leisurely trek, knowing a delightful gastronomic adventure awaited you at the lake site. Cantankerous bindings, deep powder snow, and a lack of expertise could not deter meophytes such as myself from reaching our intended savory goal; thanks to the patient encouragement and assistance offered by the more experienced members of the group.

Once at the lake site everyone put their ravenous appetites to rest by generously contributing to the inventive buffet. Among their delicious entrees were: fat German sausages steeped in spicy mustard or rolled in garlic pastry; three choices of marinated mushrooms; stuffed olive and cheese balls; various cheeses and crackers; hot, thick, Mexican chile; succulent fruit, and bean salads; thick, rich chocolate fondue; light, flaky french pastries; jumbo oatmeal cookies, and rich cheesecake smothered in berries. All this enhanced by an appropriate selection of wines, moca, and hot coffee laced with Amaretto, all of which had their collective mellowing effect. This delightful repast easily rated four stars and would have teased the palate of a French connoisseur.

The weather cooperated by allowing the sun to shine and chase away the early morning chill, only to bring a cool, nippy afternoon breeze; reminding the reluctant overfed that it was time to police the area and return to the parking lot with a contented feeling that we had shared in one of WMC's traditional activities.

A special thanks to Ann McDonald and Joy Ray who organized and lead the outing and another "K,do" to Art Whitehead for recording the feast on film. A Bromoselzer, Anti-acid offering to: Marin Sands, Bruck Hopkins, Charles Cavanah, Irene Schilling, Hardy Schremm, Larry Hoskins, Pat Peebles, Will Lachani, Larry Ball, Dana Murphrey, Robert Kineng, Leslee Woods, Robert Royelski, Kermit Earle, Jerry Powelson, Sherie Pater, Mike Treshow, Marilyn Quetler, may your delectable recipes reign supreme at future WMC bashes.

Scott's Pass and the Ski Patrol Scramble by Jeff Robinson

Fourteen of us headed up Big Cottonwood Canyon on a sunshiny November 20th. We were greeted by about eight inches of new snow, and began cutting fresh tracks up the mountain. A snowshoe rabbit and a porcupine watched us puffing up the trail. Soon everyone had tucked their coat into their packs and beads of perspiration were to be seen.

Near the pass we encountered some tracks. Someone had beaten us to the top. At last we reached the pass and rounded the last corner. We were looking forward to tracking up the powder in the bowl there, which later in the year will become down hiller's territory. To our chagrin all that was there was the remains of a fresh avalanche, Milt Hollander and Terry Rollins. On seeing us they proudly proclaimed to have stabilized the slope just for us. Milt and Terry had come up another way, beaten us to the top, looked at the slope, and decided it was moderately stable. Milt had turned his way down the slope without mishap. Terry started to follow, had fallen, and set off the slide. Luckily he was just on the edge, and was not buried at all. In fact he said he rather enjoyed being swept down the mountain. As it carried him about fifty feet he was watching the main part of the slide and the associated sympathetic releases. The slide had been a soft slab a foot to two feet deep at the fracture line. It was about seventy five yards wide and had run out into the flats for a couple hundred yards. Milt exclaimed he had never wrecked so much powder so fast.

Terry and Milt were hiking back up to the ridge to ski the remaining little patch of virgin snow and the rest of the club members were settling down for lunch when the still air was cut by the sound of a snow cat. The cat roared right up to the pass and two patrolmen jumped from the cat and began shouting had anyone seen the slide, and was anyone buried? They were assured everyone was all right and they rather angrily questioned Milt and Terry. Pretty soon more ski patrolmen started arriving. it seems the resort had fired up the Jupiter lift, which was not yet open and the whole ski patrol had mobilized to rescue buried souls in the slide. In all about a dozen ski patrol members arrived by skiing down the ridge from the lift. We WMCers sat off to the side eating lunch and criticizing the patrolmen's ski technique as they arrived one by one. As each new patrolman arrived, Terry and Milt had to repeat their story. Finally the head of the patrol arrived and told Milt and Terry they had to come back to the resort to sign waivers, reports and release forms. We waved as they disappeared down the valley flanked by the patrolmen. The show and our lunch were over so we packed up and had a nice cruise back to the cars as clouds moved in. Trip members were Trudy Healy, Dennis Zwang, Mike Hendrickson, Jim Mullen, Jim Watts, Michale Budig, Paul Rubinfeld, Hand Winawer, John Riley, Don Birestone, Chuck Ranney, Karl Lagerberg, Jeff Robinson and Bill Monnie.
