TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO IN THE RAMBLER

AUGUST 1969

BY DALE GREEN, HISTORIAN

"One rancher in the Escalante-Boulder area has threatened to break into Sierra Club and Wasatch Mountain Club cars parked at the heads of canyons in the area. You are advised not to have anything in your car that identifies you as a hiker or conservationist. In fact, if you have an old bale of hay, or an old saddle around your house, you would be wise to leave them in your car." (From Conservation Notes by June Viavant.)

In another conservation matter, WMCers and the Forest Service managed to divert a planned National Guard Special Forces Group camp away from Lone Peak Cirque. They had originally scheduled 400 men to camp there for four days of intensive training in mountain climbing and snow survival.

The Bell Canyon Irrigation Company posted notices all over the entrance to the canyon that they owned all access and that no camping, riding horses, swimming or hiking would be allowed. The water was a culinary watershed serving over 1000 persons. Hiking by persons over 16 years of age was allowed only by permit.

WMC "Mountaineer" patches were being "bestowed upon those members who possess the necessary combination of mountaineering judgment, skills, and ability." The purpose was to ensure that there will always be an adequate supply of competent people to improve and perpetuate the mountaineering program of the WMC.

FIFTY YEARS AGO IN THE WMC

AUGUST, 1944

(From Board of Directors' minutes)

Approval was given to repair the Juke Box and radio at the Lodge. The other pressing Lodge business was installing new linoleum on the kitchen drain boards.

Trips scheduled for August and September were a Beach Party, Lake Blanche hike, Lodge Labor Day, and Wood Cutting.

QUESTION: LAST MONTH'S TRIVIA QUIZ: "Is the highest range in Utah called the "Uinta" or Uintah" Mountains? Why is there a different spelling?

Answer:

Originally "Uintah" was used for all purposes. Then around the turn of the century a few prominent geographers and geologists started using "Uinta", dropping the "h", saying it was unnecessary for pronunciation. However, several political boundaries had already been established using "Uintah". As a compromise. The Board on Geographic Names has issued a strict rule: Geographic names use "Uinta"; political boundaries use "Uintah." Thus we have the Uinta Mountains (geographic) in Uintah County (politically established). Exceptions (made before the rule) include Uinta County in Wyoming and the Uinta Nat'l Forest, both political boundaries. Don't try to convince anyone living in the Uinta Basin (Vernal, Roosevelt, etc.) of this rule. To them, it is all Uintah.

TRIVIA QUIZ: What are the official names of the valleys in which Salt Lake City and Ogden City are located?

The constellation SAGITTARIUS (the teapot) now marks the southern horizon after dark and the MILKY WAY stretches northward through Cygnus to Cassiopeia. The earth crosses the orbital plane of the PERSEID meteor swarm about midnight August 11 (August Sky and Telescope, p. 72). The early morning of August 12 is probably the best time to watch for Perseids.

VENUS and JUPITER (if it's still there) dominates the evening sky; Jupiter high in the southwest and Venus growing brighter in the west. On August 31, watch Venus pass close to the south of the bright star Spica. SATURN now rises in the southeast between dark and midnight.

FROM THE HIKING DIRECTOR

by Donn Seeley

My thanks to Brad Yates and Randy Long for doing the calling for the August Rambler. Since both of them have already called this year, it was beyond the call of duty (well, almost...). I did the calling for car camps and backpacks myself, and had a miserable time. It appears that most people are making their own out of town trips in the summer this year. The inevitable reminder: if people don't lead trips, they don't happen. It's all the work of volunteers. There's still a little time to get a trip into the September Rambler; give me a call at (595-1747) and I'll get your trip listed.

We normally stop hiking in October because of hunting season, but hiking can continue through November in a dry year, and there are a few places to hike or camp away from the flying bullets in October. Last year Cheryl Soshnik led a wonderful November hike up Pilot Peak which is just across the Nevada border near Wendover. Other November hikes visited the Wasatch foothills or rugged areas in the West Desert. During Utah's hunting season, it's fun to take car camps or backpacks into southern Utah's National Parks or to neighboring states whose hunting seasons don't overlap with Utah's. Consider a camping trip to Capitol Reef, Zion or the Needles. There will be no further Hiking Committee meetings this season, so give me a call at 595-1747 if you would like to do a hike or out-of-town trip in October or November.

CARIBBEAN SAILING TRIP

Oct 22-Nov 6

Vince DeSimone (Sailing Coordinator)

This year's sailing trip will be to the Leeward Islands of St. Martin, St. Barts, Statia, St. Kitts, Nevis, Barbuda, and Antigua. These islands are a delightful combination of French, African, English, and Dutch cultures that blend harmoniously on lush islands of forests, mountains, beaches, flowers, and exotic birds.

It is not necessary to have sailing experience to participate, only a positive attitude and willingness to get involved with your share of the chores. We will average 5 hours per day under sail. Once at anchor, substantial time will be spent at play in the water and exploring on shore.

All three sail boats are full: a 4th boat will be added if an experienced skipper and first mate can be found. Persons with or without sailing experience who are interested in the trip should contact me (649-6805). A deposit of $300 sent to: Vince DeSimone, PO Box 680111 Park City, UT 84068-0111. The cost for the trip is expected to be about $1750 including air fare, boat costs, food, etc. If space becomes available, people will be added from a waiting list. If a 4th boat is added, it is likely that 10 days will be spent on the water instead of 14 and we will return to SLC on Nov. 2.

FROM THE BOATING DIRECTOR

by Gene Jarvis

I recently read an interesting article on river safety and I thought it might be timely to share it with you. It was on Strainers, and what a serious hazard they are to River Runners. Strainers, by definition is any object which does not block the flow of water but can trap large objects, such as people. Most commonly strainers are trees, but they can also be fences or boulder sieves. What is the best way to deal with strainers? Avoid them!!! But if by chance, you are knocked out of the boat and are being swept toward a fallen tree in swift current, what are you gonna do? Swim head first toward it. As crazy as it sounds, if you cannot get out of the current and around the strainer all together, then the best thing you can do is get into a downstream crawl stroke position and aggressively swim or climb up on the tree.

In contrast, if you encountered the tree while moving downstream on your back in the feet first position (the position used to safely descend rocky rapids), you will most probably be swept under the tree. You would risk the possibility of being pinned against underwater branches. If you see you are headed for a Strainer, you must plan ahead to make this change of position in order to climb over the log, as you will not be able to do so after you get hung-up. Practice in a controlled setting will help make this move instinctive.

Swim "head first" toward the strainer and climb up on it. Never approach the strainer "feet first."

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

by Jerry Hatch

Several years ago, Carol Anderson did a monthly column for the Rambler titled "Wasatch Mountain Club Personalities." It was well written and gave a companionable look at some of the people who helped make the Club the great organization it is. At the last board retreat, we all agreed that it would be nice if the column could be revived. Unfortunately because of her teaching commitments, Carol is unable to take on the task, indeed writing a column every month is a big job. However, I thought that if three or four of us were to take turns, it wouldn't be too onerous. I'll go first, and if any of you would like to contribute, give me a call.

Wasatch Mountain Club Personalities

O'Dell and Edith Peterson

by Jerry Hatch

The immaculate little bungalow I stepped into reminded me of my paternal grandparents' house on 17th South. O'Dell, now eighty-four years of age and somewhat stooped, greeted me in the doorway, his handshake still firm and his kind smile welcoming. After introducing me to his wife, Edith, we all sat in the living room and they began to tell me about the old days of the Club.

O'Dell joined the Club in the summer of 1928, soon after he graduated from East High School. A German immigrant and fellow shoemaker had taken him on his first Club trip—up Little Black Mountain. (As a historian I couldn't help thinking about the world of 1928; Hoover was president; alcohol was illegal; cars had running boards; icemen delivered ice in horse drawn wagons. For most people the only way to travel any distance was behind a steam driven locomotive.)

How vastly different the local landscape we enjoy was then! O'Dell described the road to Brighton as a couple of dirt ruts, passable only after the last snow melted and before the first snow fell. To get to Brighton in the winter, you skied over from Park City. Edith explained, "Brighton Basin was a flat white plain in winter, with slides and the drifts coming down mostly unchecked by any trees". (The miners had cut them down in the nineteenth century and they had not yet grown back.)

There were some big trees up near Lake Mary, however, and in 1929 the Club began cutting some of them. Horses and mules rented from Ma Green's Stables at Silver Lake dragged the trees down to the Club's new Lodge site. O'Dell was one of the two hundred or so Club members who built the Lodge, something he is very proud of. Only last week he drove up there to inspect his work with Rich Osborne and said, pointing to an old base log, "I probably put that log in." When I asked O'Dell about other surviving builders, he was sure he was the last one. It's not too surprising; sixty-five years is a long time.

Besides working on the Lodge, O'Dell helped put the original register boxes on most of the peaks of the Wasatch Front. He has served as vice-president and hiking director, and he was one of the original rock climbers in the State. (Yes, Pete's Rock is named after him.) During World War II, he aided Pa Perry with the Club's civil defense activities. His greatest service to the Club was, however, placing the Club's phone in his shoe repair shop. For several decades when someone called the Wasatch Mountain Club, O'Dell answered, took messages, solved problems, and generally acted as the Club's secretary.

O'Dell married Edith "Pinkie" Christensen in 1939 after a romantic Club courtship. An active hiker and climber, Edith has held several Club offices, including commissary director. (In the old days of bad roads and no refrigeration at the Lodge, getting the food together for even a weekend at the Lodge was a major undertaking.)

I asked the Peterson's if they had any great adventures while members of the Club. Being avid Rambler readers they were able to guess the import of my question, and told me that in all their years of hiking and climbing with the Club, neither one of them had ever been injured. O'Dell remembered several rescue expeditions, including picking up scattered mail from the bottom of Hogum's Fork following a 1930's airline disaster.

Most of what they remembered were the good times—the good friends: Jim Shane, Harold Goodro, Sam and Edith Green, Homer Collins, Burt Jensen, Pa Perry, Fred and Colleen Speyer and others, all fondly remembered. O'Dell recalled with satisfaction his first, hobnail boot and guideless ascent of the Grand Teton. Edith remembered traveling down to Moab in the ten passenger Miller Bus Company buses. O'Dell told about trying to put a pipe in under the floor of the kitchen, getting so stuck that they had to rip the floor boards up to get him out. Both remembered how wonderful the Smith's hamburgers were across from where the Cotton Bottom is now. This they enjoyed after the Thursday night climbing session.

In the end, the conversation drifted back onto the subject of the Lodge. We talked about how it was the most unique place in Brighton; in the maelstrom of change that has overwhelmed Brighton, the Lodge is virtually the only large structure from that era to have survived. Edith, with nostalgic sadness noted, "There are too many fond memories for too many thousands of people for the Lodge to be destroyed." O'Dell, the last builder, added simply, "Hang on to our Lodge; that's the main thing right now!"

The latest in tandem travel. You can't beat that new road up the canyon either! Year and where the photo was taken is unidentified. But thanks to our historian, Dale Green, we have these unique treasures of our past.

VAN COTT PEAK

by Richard Zeamer

The almost three hour Van Cott Peak Hike this Sunday was not the afternoon stroll that some of the participants expected. The sun hung hot and the trail up the north ridge above Cephalopod Gulch was steep, almost 35 degrees for 100 foot stretches. Two ladies, one with a small dog, stopped after climbing the first steep slope, looked ahead to see more steep climbs to come, took a short rest, then wisely headed back down.

Another threesome continued to climb slope after slope, almost making it to the top of Cephalopod Gulch where they stopped, rested, and talked over the situation. I went back to encourage them, letting them know the worst was over, but they were hot and uncomfortable, and decided to head back. The remainder hiked across the half mile of pleasant ridge meadow land and up a gentle back slope to Van Cott Peak. Bart Bartholoma, a champion greyhound type hiker, led the pack all the way. On the almost level grassy top, Bart, Will, Jane and myself chatted while eating our snack food and took time to gaze at the stupendous views.

Which way down was opened for discussion. Finally we all opted for the most direct route, one I had previously checked out and suggested we use. This went down the ridge just below the peak, south of the Gulch, around a rocky shoulder near the bottom. Again Bart led the way, this time on the run. We couldn't, and decided not to, keep up with him; for us, it was a pleasant walk enjoying the meadows and flowers—everything Bart must have missed on his flight.

VAN COTT PEAK #2

by William Vogel

Eight Club members and prospects joined Richard Zeamer for a rare Sunday afternoon Club hike. Richard first explained the Club rules and the unofficial hiker classifications: greyhounds, regulars, and turtles before he described the route ascending the peak (behind the University Hospital) via Cephalopod Gulch Ridge. The 93 degree weather and shadeless route may have had a role in only four of us reaching the summit at 6,348'. Those attaining the higher elevations enjoyed expanses of wild-flowers, including an occasional sego lily, and broad vistas of Salt Lake Valley. Hikers: D. Rebecca Fleischman, Gina Rieke, William Vogel, Rita Kelley and son Chris, Mary Wade, Bart Bartholoma, Jane Weaver, and our leader.

THAYNES-NEFFS CANYON LOOP

by Jim Bailey

As I scanned faces at the Thaynes' trailhead, I realized many of the hikers were over-qualified veterans, including several regular leaders of Club activities, some of the strongest hikers in the Club. I have a preference to lead from the rear where I can keep an eye on less experienced hikers, so I was relieved to know that I would not need to worry about the folks in front.

As many of this group were in the habit of leading, not following, I kept my pre-hike instructions to a minimum. I gave a brief rundown on the two critical junctures in the trail and recommended the group wait up at these points for the slower hikers (including the leader). In case some of them could not wait, I further described the remainder of the trail up to our designated lunch spot at the pass between canyons.

As the tail end of the group reached the spring just below the Desolation Trail, the front group leader called down from the trail above and I confirmed they had made the proper turn at the first juncture. I thought unlike some of those lower rated newcomers hikes I had led in the past, this hike would be uneventful and trouble free; everything was going smoothly—so far.

The tail group reached the second and last critical juncture where the Thaynes-Neffs trail leaves the Desolation Trail. Where was the lead group, armed with the latest official maps, compasses, and some of the most savvy hikers in the Wasatch? Apparently, they elected not to wait and were long gone.

As our little band of survivors ate lunch at the pass, we cogitated on the fate of the others. Most, if not all of them were intimately familiar with the Desolation Trail, and many had the very latest official Club map and compasses in their possession. Surely, at least one of these vets would become suspicious when they reached the pass near Thaynes Peak or rounded Reynolds Peak; perhaps Dog Lake would give them a clue. I speculated that at least Mark, Knick, Cassie, and Rich would quickly notice something was awry and have the group turn around. As hoped, after about half an hour of waiting, those four plus Sue, arrived at the pass. My failure rate improved to a respectable 6 out of 14 lost. Still, I chastised these new found lambs and told them I would have to improve my screening process on future hikes to weed out the overqualified.

The lead group, I was told, stopped briefly at the final critical trail juncture to consult their official Club map, which by the way, is accurate in regard to this trail. They decided by committee or dictum, it was not the correct turnoff. Upon nearing Thaynes Peak, Knick and Mark became wary and glanced back to notice our little group congregating for lunch back at Neffs Pass. Realizing their error, they returned, followed by Sue, Cassie and Rich. The rest of the lead group had gone too far ahead for them to signal. While we waited patiently for our arrivals to eat lunch, we were encircled from above by half a dozen or so turkey vultures. We signaled the varmints to try their luck circling our lost companions back on Desolation Trail.

Once those remaining hikers were seen returning via the correct trail and within shouting distance, we descended into Neffs, which included a short side trip to the pass overlooking Big Cottonwood Canyon. Upon ascending to the pass, we were overtaken by the wayward souls, where upon the self-appointed leader of the group logically explained, tongue-in-cheek, "The hike was not rated high enough for a good aerobic workout, so we decided to upgrade it from 6.5 to 10.5 by taking a side trip on the Desolation Trail to Mount Raymond."

After completing the loop, I was relieved to have everyone checked off and accounted for. There may be a better moral to this tale than the one I propose. Perhaps on certain hikes with relatively low ratings, some reverse screening may be advisable, "Sorry! You can't go on this hike, you're too physically fit, and you have too much knowledge and experience of the Wasatch to follow the leader's advice and directions."

Participants/survivors: Judy Frojen, John Shavers, Pamela DeCorte, Mark Jones, Knick Knickerbocker, Cassie Badowsky, Rich Osborne, Ira Seidman, Chris Baierschmidt, Larry Schumer, Sue Gardner, Mike and Jean Binyon, and Mohamed Abdallah.

NORTH SLOPE OF THE UNITAS

by Hank Winawer

A forecast of 102 degree in the Salt Lake area was reason enough to escape to the Uintas. After meeting a sixth member of our group near Peoa, we drove two and a half miles on a kidney wrenching narrow dirt road to the trailhead. Hoyts Peak was our destination. At an altitude of 10,228 feet, it was 3,128 feet above our starting point and about nine miles round trip. Milt estimated a rating of approximately 7.5.

The sky was clear. The temperature about 65 degrees in the morning and warmed to the high seventies by mid-afternoon; perfect for hiking the Uintas. Except for some pesky horse flies and an assortment of their winged friends, the trip was magnificent. The Pentstemon, Lupine, Columbine, Geranium and Paintbrush were scattered among the Aspens, out in full bloom, making a perfect picture postcard setting.

We hiked (in part) along the old Movie Road and past a log cabin and out building used by the Grizzly Adams TV series a few years back. We lunched atop a mountain which our leader Milt had thought to be Hoyts Peak. Another mountain about a half mile distant appeared to be slightly higher, so off we went to claim "the top." En route, a helicopter circled near by, perhaps checking for wildfires. Once on top, we glanced back to our lunch site and now that peak looked higher. In my mind, the mystery of the real Hoyts' mountain peak remains. I proposed we check out the elevation of the two peaks. The higher of the two should be christened Hoyts: the other Milt's Folly.

On our descent we quietly watched a doe bound through the Aspens and moments later a large buck, probably her mate, strolled through a wild-flower laden meadow. As with most WMC outings, the scenery, the camaraderie and the experience of the wilderness was therapeutic. Our congenial group: Nancy Phillips, Bill Franks, Diana Atkins, Camille Pierce, Milt Hollander (leader), and myself.

GREENS BASIN HIKE

by Jolenn Wisner

Greens Basin was the easiest hike offered this particular Saturday. Many of us were beginners, making this hike a good choice for testing the terrain, our endurance and skill level. Doug Stark commented that beginners are always noticeable because they wear tennis shoes.

As we ascended, one sound that seemed incongruous with the surroundings was not one but two small children crying as their parents brought them down the trail from a night of camping out in the mountains. It appeared they were not enjoying their adventure. How their mom and dad were doing was unclear. We also passed another party of over-night campers along our ascent.

Several members of the hiking party were expert at identifying the numerous wild-flowers in the area. We found a log cabin shelter at the top among the pines and took a snack break to visit the facility before the return trip.

Our group of twenty-six split into two on the return, one group returning the same way we came up, the other following Uli down an alternate route. The group I was in must have missed a turn somewhere and came out on the roadway not knowing if the parking lot was up or down. A passing cyclist confirmed that the Spruces parking lot was down the road a short distance and soon we all met up again.

TWIN PEAKS REZONING ALERT

by Randy Long

Rezoning above the Golden Hills area is one hot issue. We need the help of everyone! Two or three hearings have already been held and the county remains ambivalent. Part of the area will be FR 20, (forest residences-1 on 20-acre lots), but part will be rezoned down to just 1 acre if the developers have their way. Part is also steeper than 30 percent grade, which exceeds the Hillside Protection Ordinance.

The Golden Hills-Top of the World Neighborhood Association, founded mainly to work on these issues, wants it all to be zoned FR-20. The Association has proposed a park at roughly 8600 South which the county seems to be opposing.

We'll probably get the Deaf Smith Trailhead and possibly one route to Hounds Tooth saved, but that may be all. See the map for details or call me (943-0244).

An evening hearing has been scheduled for Wed., Aug., 31 at 5:30 pm at the County Commission Chamber, (2001 So. State St., Rm. 1100). PLEASE BE THERE!

KESSLER PEAK VIA ARGENTA TRAIL

July 3

by Karen Perkins

Over 100 years ago, Argenta Flat in Big Cottonwood Canyon was the site of a mining village by the same name. The name argent, means both silver and money in French. The miners were hoping, as all miners do, to find the motherlode. Whatever ore was recovered was hauled by pack teams dragging large filled rawhides from the mines above. A gully carved by hooves and hides is now the trail our trip leader Charles Keller managed to retrace and clear over the past two or more years. Today, Charlie generously shared this new and direct route to his favorite mountain with 15 Club members.

The trail ascends quickly but pleasantly toward Kessler, being shaded at the bottom as it passes through meadows of flowers and rimed by quakes. Near the top it joins with the Mineral Fork trail that goes east, up over the ridge and north to a pile of handsome gray limestone known on the map as Kessler. Keller Peak might be a more appropriate name, since this was Charles' 59th ascent in thirty or so years.

The 3rd dawned unseasonably hot in the Valley. The hike to Kessler was reasonably paced, cool, beautiful, and with congenial camaraderie. A leisurely lunch provided time to enjoy the 360 degree view before descending rapidly via Charles' "North Trail." This trail Charles pieced together from fragments of old mining and game trails he discovered some years ago.

Club members who enjoyed the benefits of Charles' trail clearing efforts were: Ellie Ienatsch, Martin McGregor, Larry Schumer, Steve Watson, Paul Parkin, Ann Weschsler, Jim Janney, Alex Ranney, Marty Kolker, Betty Cluff, Duane Call, Jerry Powelson, and yours truly. Charles' capable assistant and leader from the rear was Allene Keller.

PS: We understand Charles plans to make his 66th ascent of Kessler (Keller Peak) this fall on the occasion of his 66th birthday. He hasn't said which of his seven routes he'll be taking, but we all wish him Happy Birthday and a hike long to be remembered!!! [Ed. note: Perhaps he'll invite some of his WMC friends to celebrate it with him. How about it Charlie?]

GRANDEUR PEAK

by Randy Long

Grandeur Peak from Church Fork, was designated an intermediate and "adolescent" hike. A "big 9" stalwarts showed up at the meeting place. Before taking off, I explained that Grandeur, Grand View, and Lookout, are all named for their spectacular views. Then, when we started up the summit ridge, the view started living up to its name. By the time we reach the peak, we beheld a "grandeur" view of the Valley below us.

The climb up the open south-facing switch-backs was long and we encountered a snake, both easily overcome. Other hikers came up from the west ridge and joined us for lunch. After lunch we enjoyed the return trip.

Participants: Frank Bacon, Julie Barraclough, Janet Friend, H. Ross Hammond, Jay Larson, Camren Larson, James Nelson, Jewel Wardle, and myself.

NEWCOMER'S HIKE AND BARBECUE

July 18

by Alan Brennan and Felecia Kulsic

The day started early, packing the foodstuff items purchased and prepared the preceding evening. At the mouth of Big Cottonwood Canyon, confusion reigned amongst some 50-odd people as we sorted Newcomer's Barbecuers from White Pine Lakers and Greens Basineers. Finally, 27 Barbecuers pooled together into cars, headed toward the Lodge, whence ensued a treacherous negotiation of the boulder field that was once the Brighton parking lot. Points were added to the barbecue rating for auto-scrambling.

A human pack train was formed in the parking lot, taking the plentiful supplies up the snow-free path to the Lodge. After stowing the goods, it was off to Lake Mary and points beyond, with Uli assuming firm, yet gentle leadership of the bunch and Felecia riding herd in the middle of the pack. The first casualty of the hike was Alan who turned back early in order to start the charcoal and roast the potatoes.

Meanwhile, the rest of us trucked up the mountain to Lake Catherine, where we enjoyed basking in the sun, ate a quick snack while anticipating the wonderful feast when we returned to the Lodge. A trip of more hardy hikers pushed themselves all the way to Sunset Peak so arrived fashionably late for the luncheon. Hikers, as they trickled back to the Lodge patio, found potatoes a'baking on red-hot charcoal. Darrel assumed the role of world class barbecuer while lending an appreciated hand in the preparation of the meat items.

The boneless skinned chicken breast was a big hit along with the broccoli and cheese. Hamburgers met with moderate approval and the corn on-the-cob was less enthusiastically consumed (most likely because it wasn't quite done when the consumers wanted to consume it.) As a sign of the health conscious American times, not one hot dog passed human lips. Sun chips, potato chips, brownies and chocolate chip cookies rounded out the afternoon's fare.

A fortunate few stuck around for a wonderfully informative WMC history lesson presented by Alexis Kelner and his trusty slide projector. Three trays of slides documented almost eighty years of WMC participation in hiking, skiing, conservation, and social and political activism along the Wasatch Range.

Many thanks to Alexis and those who helped with the cleanup. Congratulations to all the now full initiated new members of the WMC. (Apologies for misspellings) Darrel Prows, Audrey Rindfleisch, Gary Myers, Richard Korowicki, Donna Lynn Sorenson Pierce, Brenda Barrus, Jaynee Levy, Amy Fisher, Lee Baxter, Earl Cook, Monda Shuti, Sam Kievit, Kris Taylor, Jan Brain, Kris Russell, Susan Griguahn, Carol Symakieuner, Helen Louie, Kent willie, Ray Gromer, John and Laura Shavers, Colleen Keller, Jane Weaver and Uli Hegewald.

LONE PEAK HIKE

by Ken "Locutus" Engstrom

The weather was absolutely favorable for this long hike. Fourteen or so people and one dog met at the ungodly hour of 7:00 am to car pool to the Jacob's Ladder trail head. It must be called this because it goes straight up.

This hiker started out slow, staying in the back with Mohamed who was the "watch-dog" for us lag-gards. Actually, our slow group was just pacing itself. But our companion, Monty took off like a shot, as is his wont, and we didn't see him again till he was yelling down on us from the top of the south peak where we were not headed.

After the ladder, the trail moderated quite a bit, it changed to a coniferous, rocky landscape. We were a little uncertain about the trail and ended going up a boulder field to get into the cirque where Louise declared she liked boulder hopping. I knew she was having fun by observing the bush whacking scratches on her legs. We hadn't seen the fast group of 10 for a long time and figured they must be at the top; we were surprised to see them far below as we started up the final ridge. They either took a short cut or got lost, I don't know which. This was an unexpected opportunity that Louise and I were loath to pass up, so we quickened our pace to beat them to the top. George had already been up there half an hour before we arrived and shortly thereafter everyone summited.

Louise claimed the very highest point as her throne because she has no fear, but I huddled in the middle of the lower flat table with several other people who get the willies at high exposed places. It is somewhat tricky and exposed getting up there and back down for someone with a touch of acrophobia. Warm, sunny and calm conditions made the lunch stop on the peak most pleasant.

We hiked down the way we should have come up. The ladder was hotter and dustier going down, and Kiara must have had problems with her contacts since she put on some eyeglasses. By the time this hiker got back to the cars, there was only one left. Poor George must have been waiting well over an hour for us. Everyone who expressed an opinion commented favorably on the hike, including this writer.

Restaurant Review

Every month we hold a pre-board meeting at the Cafe Trang, to which every Club member is invited to attend. In lieu of Ms E.T. Moore's absence, I decided to review the Cafe Trang, hoping some of you might overcome your shyness and meet us there at 6:00 pm on the first Wednesday of each month.

If you're new to Vietnamese cuisine, once is not enough. Experience it a few times, trying different types of meals before deciding if it's for you. The flavor of some dishes is similar to Chinese food, but I found there is a broader variety of you're willing to explore with your taste buds.

Only Jerry and Jim decided to start their meals with appetizers of egg rolls and pot stickers—almost a meal in itself when you add the rice. Each customer is served their own entree with the exception of the rice. Four bowls set on the lazy susan provide about 2 cups each, more than enough for our group. As a non-meateater, I was pleasantly surprised to find a vegetable fried rice offering. Mike ordered sweet and sour fried shrimp, only $5.95, which we decided to share with one another. Fortunate decision. The rice platter I ordered contained about 3 cups of rice with small chunks of tofu, peas, carrot slivers, and onions. Delicious! And the price of $5.95 was fair for that size portion. The shrimp had more batter than I cared for, not unusual for tempura dishes; yet the flavor of sweet and sour tastefully blended. Donn, being more adventuresome, chose a spicy dish: chicken with wild grass and red pepper rice at $6.75, one of the more expensive dishes. My only negative comment would be in receiving our meals; they did not arrive at the same time. This could be a virtue in that each course came so piping hot, perhaps we were being served as they came off the stove.

The staff, made up mostly of Asian men and women, is friendly, and genuinely helpful and not intrusive for groups such as ours. In 1989, Utah Holiday, reviewed this restaurant and said of it, "...the only low-to-medium priced, ethnic restaurant to hang into the top ten list,....the emphasis is on the food, which is fresh and interesting...." I heartily agree! Our Board agrees and you're invited to share this experience along with any WMC concern or anecdote you have.

MORE CAR CAMPS—PLEASE!

by Randy Long

What has happened to all the car camps we used to have? We had two or three spring ones at San Rafael Swell and Books Cliffs, two at the Arches, one at Dinosaur, Escalante, Great National Park, and Tuschar Mountains, and that's about all. Only two for July and possibly none for August or September. None have been in the Uintas or any other local mountain range. What's the deal? Well: Our hiking director tells me that leaders are just saying no.

PLEASE PEOPLE—when you are called, don't say "I'll lead it only if it can be a backpack," or "I'll wait until the Rambler comes out." That's too late. If you can lead a backpack, you can lead a car camp. Remember, we call in late June, July and August [for leaders]. There are a lot of Club members who enjoy car camping but are not up to backpacking. Also, an area that is good for backpacking (such as the Uintas or the national parks), is also good for car camping.

So far I've only led day hikes, but I am giving some thought about doing a car camp next year since there has been an insufficient number of them this year, in my opinion. I hope they don't become an endangered species. Everyone's cooperation is needed. Thanks.

WARNING! ALERT! TAKE HEED!

Dear Editor,

I want to issue a warning to all Club members who participate in any car-pooling activities. Be Aware, car break-ins are on the rise again. A recent theft of a car stereo system at the Draper Park and Ride occurred while the car's owner car-pooled to the trailhead. Don't leave valuables in your vehicles and consider car-pooling from home with friends you know will be hiking, boating, etc. the same day you are.

Sincerely,

A recent victim

Mailing Lists to Other Organizations

From time to time, the Board authorizes giving the Club's mailing list to other conservation/wilderness organizations. (The list is never given to commercial enterprises or to organizations which do not share the Club's philosophy.) Recognizing that some members may not want their names on these lists, future renewal forms and new membership applications will have a box which you can check to indicate that you do not want your name to appear on these lists. If you have already renewed and do not want your name given to these organizations, please call the office (363-7150) to make that known.

July 6 Board Meeting

Attending: Jerry Hatch, Rich Osborne, Jim Zinanti, Gene Jarvis, John Veranth, Sam Kievit, Linda Kosky, Nance Allen, Donn Seeley, Cheryl Soshnik, Mary Ann Losee, Larene Miller, Carla Western, Dale Green

A committee will be formed to consider how to properly remember and honor past Club members who made significant contributions. Also, we will try to decide how to make Club members more aware of Club history. (i.e. exhibits, Club history book, etc.)

The Board will present options for Lodge use and management at the General Membership Meeting in October.

The Club donated $200 to SPLORE and $250 to the Rocky Mountain Land and Water Conservation Fund.

The Board voted to require non-members who come on rafting trips to pay estimated costs up front. There was a problem with a non-Club member who hasn't yet paid full bill for himself and two children on a Club family trip.
